Proposed Memorial to Congress.
To the Honorable Senate and House of Representatives:

Gentlemen, it is assumed that the production of the precious metals from our own soil is one of the essential industries of the country, and one which should be encouraged and aided by the Government. The production of silver and gold, and the increasing quantities would be of vast service in aiding to bring the balance of trade with foreign countries in our favor.

That immense quantities of silver and gold are to be found in paying proportions in our western mountains, is a fact well known to all who are familiar with the mining regions between the east slope of the Rocky Mountains and the Pacific Coast. The Pacific railway has given a great impetus to the discovery of mines and to the speculations incident to the discovery, but not to so great an extent to production. Mines are discovered, and wild speculations based on them; but they are not worked. In a thousand mining districts hardly men are annually proving the existence of ores of great value, or rather which would have great value and be made useful in the channels of commerce, if means were at hand to reduce the ore, and to separate the precious from the waste metals. Hundreds of millions of dollars might be added to the annual product of our country if mills for the reduction of ore in new mining districts were in successful operation, near by, or within easy access.

It is respectfully suggested to your honorable body, that a great Government which feels the urgent need of a greater supply of the precious metals for currency, and as a commodity to export, should not rely on the slender means of a few pioneer miners of ore to develop, by few experiments and with inadequate means, the immense mining interests that lie locked up in the ore of many of the richest mining districts of America. The great needs of the mining regions, the new districts especially, are mills for the reduction of the ore and for obtaining the greatest possible proportion of the precious metals out of them. It is a well known fact that some of the richest ores are refractory—that is to say, it is difficult to separate the silver and gold from the waste metals.

The ores of each new mining district, and often of contiguous mines in the same district, are different from each other in ever varying chemical combinations, and to insure the most successful mode of thoroughly eliminating the precious metals, requires patient, careful and costly experiments. Private fortunes are sunk in isolated efforts, in a thousand different mining districts, to build smelting and reducing works. These experiments, all tending to eventual success, stop short of it for want of capital, of unity of action, and of full knowledge of the means in successful use in other parts of the world. The pioneer who sinks his own and his friends' fortunes in unsuccessful mills, occasionally sees a more profitable way, by his culture, and reaping the fruits of his sacrifices. Oftener, however, the first failures discourage further experiments, and postpone indefinitely the development of rich mining districts. There is a vast field here for wise assistance by the Government, in the development of this mining wealth, and we would respectfully call your attention to the following suggestions:

1st. The establishment and endowment of a Mining Bureau, not only to collect every kind of information of a practical or scientific character, pertaining to the mining and reducing of the precious metals; but, also, in addition, with the best experience of the mining regions at its service, to establish and maintain experimental mills at the most promising centers of ore production.

2d. The establishment of Government Schools of Mining in connection with the Mining Bureau.

These schools should be located at points central to the greatest mining interests, and where students would necessarily become familiar with, and workers in the various departments of mining. For the precious metals the schools should be located at such points as Salt Lake City, Denver, Virginia City, etc., and should embrace the smelting and reducing mills, and all the practical operations necessary to success in reducing the ore peculiar to each region. In these schools the most successful practical ore millers, and the most skillful chemists, could be brought together, and each successful or unsuccessful experiment be made a step towards the success. Such a department, under the general direction of an able and industrious head, supplied with means to work with, would be likely to develop with certainty and rapidly the best means of making the ore of each region profitable.

The advantages of having youths practically educated to undertake specialties in manufacturing arts, has been too fully proved in Europe, within the past twenty years, to admit of a doubt. It is only by a training in the mill itself that one can learn to be a skillful miller of grain or of ore; and schools for the advancement of our mining skill must be at or near the mines and mills, to develop most efficiently the practical results sought.

their expenditures for this expedition, was organized in June, 1873, under authority of an Act of Congress passed in 1872, and in order to facilitate their work have divided the United States into five parts, Northern, Southern, Eastern, Western and Middle. These parts are assigned to committees chosen from the Board, and the powers of the Western Committee, in which are included California and Nevada, have been vested in General H. S. Lansing, who has recently arrived in California. Mr. Lansing has appointed a State Committee, and taken vigorous measures to insure the raising of the quota assigned to that State, which is $145,500. The portion assigned for Nevada's quota in this enterprise, we believe, but $11,000, a considerable portion of which was pledged last Winter in Carson, Gold Hill and Virginia City, but it is a matter of State pride to have our subscriptions largely exceed this amount. We are informed that General Lansing will soon visit Nevada and inaugurate some method for raising the money required. The State of Pennsylvania alone has already raised over three and one half millions of dollars and proposes to increase her subscriptions to $4,000,000, or over one third the amount required for the Expedition. We have not space to give a full description of the project for this great World's Fair. When General Lansing shall arrive, of course, everybody will hear his description of the plans and designs for the grand celebration. [Gold Hill News.]

OUR OLDEST CORPORATION.—The Ural Mining Company, incorporated in August 28, 1851, is the oldest mining corporation in the State. Since that time, according to the Post, the number of incorporations of all kinds organized in this city is 5,759. The Ural Company was organized with a capital stock of $40,000 in 40 shares, which shows how modest people were in those days as compared with the present when companies are not stocked for less than a million, and some ten millions. The articles state that the company was formed "for the purpose of quartz mining and extracting gold from the quartz rock by pounding and crushing the same. Now-a-days the articles claim all sorts of things, such as mining, milling, building roads, cutting timber, doing a transportation business, buying and selling real estate, etc.; the principal object—namely, selling the stock—is carefully omitted in the articles of incorporation. The incorporators of the Ural were John S. Hagar, Joseph Bidleman, Wm. H. Block, James Blair, James Whitney, E. M. Block, Joel F. Lightner, William Norris, B. D. Baxter, D. S. Lord, F. B. King, and Greenville A. Mendon. The company was to mine on the Eureka and Inyo vein, in Nevada county, Cal. Of course long before this incorporation was formed, numbers of companies were organized without the formality of any regular incorporation, and that kind paid best in the end. Where a few men were working in their own interest, all equal owners, there was more to encourage them to labor earnestly than where one or two owned a controlling interest. This holds true now as well as then, and as a general rule the most successful mining companies are those that are owned by a few men, and not by a large number of stockholders. We mean legitimate mining operations.—[Mining and Scientific Press.]

HOW SHE GOT HER MONEY.—But one woman succeeded in fairly melting one of the directors. She was a young woman, not particularly pretty, perhaps, but interesting, and she had tears in her eyes, and $50 in the bank. She rushed frantically to one of the directors, and asked him if he could not draw her money. "But I can't help you to it now," said he. "But I must have it immediately," she replied, passionately. "It's all I have in the world." "Well, my dear madam, you must have patience as well as the rest," said he. "But mine is an urgent case, and I can't wait, because—"

"Well, because what?" "Because," said she with a smile on her lip and a tear in her eye, "because I'm going to be married, and I've got to get some things. The man I'm going to marry has not a cent to pay the minister, and he has only one leg, and so I've got to see to everything myself." The benevolent director dove into his pocket and produced his private purse, out of which he paid her the amount, which she said she put on her way rejoicing. [Chicago Times.]
